Woodwell Climate Research Center is an organization of renowned researchers who work with a worldwide network of partners to understand and combat climate change. We bring together hands-on experience and 35 years of policy impact to find societal-scale solutions that can be put into immediate action.
Dear Friends,

George Woodwell founded the Woodwell Climate Research Center on the belief that a healthy environment is the birthright of every human being—a vision that has endured for over 30 years. Guided by this fundamental commitment to a sustainable planet for future generations, Woodwell Climate works to advance solutions to the climate crisis through cutting edge research and real-world policy applications.

Many thoughtful and generous donors have partnered with Woodwell Climate through outright gifts to help us achieve success in these areas. As we prepare for the future, I invite you to consider legacy gifts as a way of preserving George Woodwell’s extraordinary lifelong work.

Philip B. Duffy
President and Executive Director
Known to many as America’s first environmentalist, George Perkins Marsh was a 19th century scholar, diplomat and naturalist. His book, Man and Nature, sparked the establishment of forest reserves and the national forest system. It is still widely considered a pivotal text in the founding of the conservationist and environmental movements. To express our sincere appreciation to those who commit to legacy gifts, Woodwell Climate offers lifetime membership in the George Perkins Marsh Society.

Benefits and Privileges of Membership
As a George Perkins Marsh Society member, you will enjoy the benefits that flow from sound estate and financial planning. Your generosity may result in an increased spendable income, immediate income tax deduction, reduced estate taxes, and/or reduced capital gains taxes on appreciated assets. As a member of the Society, you play an important role in securing the future of Woodwell Climate’s work to safeguard the health of our planet for generations to come.

Each year, George Perkins Marsh Society members:
• are recognized in the Honor Roll of Donors in Woodwell Climate’s annual report
• are invited to special events hosted by Woodwell Climate around the country
• receive periodic reports about Woodwell Climate activities, plus special reports from Woodwell’s president not otherwise available to the public
• are invited to participate in an annual “State of the Center” briefing hosted by Woodwell Climate President Phil Duffy

A legacy gift comes from enthusiasm for an organization’s mission, for its people, for its accomplishments, or even from a sense of duty. On all accounts, we found common ground with the Woodwell Climate Research Center and chose to name it as a beneficiary in our estate planning. Working, learning, even traveling with so many of those similarly enthusiastic about the Center’s mission have been highlights for us over three decades. How could we not join the George Perkins Marsh Society and make a commitment to Woodwell Climate’s future?

Examples of the most common legacy gifts are described here, though there are a variety of other ways to make a deferred commitment to Woodwell Climate Research Center.

Bequests

A bequest is a gift made by naming Woodwell Climate Research Center as a beneficiary in your will. This is both a simple and popular method of partnering in the Center’s future. If you already have a valid, up-to-date will, your attorney can add Woodwell Climate Research Center as a beneficiary through a simple amendment to your will called a codicil. For a straightforward bequest, we suggest the following language: “I give and bequeath the sum of ___ dollars to Woodwell Climate Research Center, Inc., a nonprofit corporation located in Falmouth, Massachusetts for its general purposes.” Bequests of all sizes are appreciated.

Alternatively, you could bequeath a particular asset or percentage of your estate rather than a dollar amount.

Living Trusts

Including Woodwell Climate in a revocable living trust works in much the same manner as a bequest. Your attorney can assist you in tailoring the language to your needs and wishes.

Don’t Have a Will?

You don’t need to be wealthy to leave a legacy bequest, but you do need a will. Woodwell Climate has partnered with FreeWill to assist you with this process. You will have the opportunity to leave a bequest to Woodwell Climate Research Center if you so choose. It’s 100% free for you to use, and most people finish in 20 minutes or less. Retirement Plans

One of the most tax-wise ways to make a gift to Woodwell Climate Research Center is through a beneficiary designation in your IRA, 401(k), 403(b), or other retirement plan. Because retirement plans at final distribution may incur considerable taxation to your estate and heirs, a gift of these assets may be one of the lowest cost ways to provide critical support for Woodwell Climate’s work. In addition, you are able to make an annual tax-free donation directly to Woodwell Climate from your IRA account. Woodwell Climate has partnered with FreeWill to offer a new online tool that will help calculate your yearly IRA distribution, and help you decide how much you can give as a qualified charitable distribution—tax free. Get started with FreeWill’s online tool and learn more—it’s free. Visit www.freewill.com/qcd/woodwellclimate

Life Insurance

Whole life, universal, and other forms of permanent life insurance policies can provide an important legacy gift for Woodwell Climate’s future. You can contribute all or part of an insurance policy that you own but no longer need.

When Woodwell Climate Research Center is named as the owner and beneficiary of an existing policy, your annual premium payments become tax-deductible. In addition, you generally are able to deduct an amount approximately equal to the current cash value of the policy for income tax purposes in the year you transfer ownership. Another option is to purchase and name Woodwell as owner/beneficiary of a new life insurance policy.
Charitable Gift Annuities

A charitable gift annuity provides you with a guaranteed fixed income for life in exchange for your irrevocable contribution, which may be in the form of cash and/or appreciated securities. Woodwell’s minimum level for funding this type of gift is $25,000.

The annuity is governed by a simple contract, and payments are made to you on a quarterly or other periodic basis. Annuity rates are based on your age at the time of the gift and typically range from 4.7 percent up to 9.5 percent.* The older you are, the higher the annuity rate. Individuals age 65 and older are eligible to begin receiving payments immediately.

Deferred Payment Annuities
For individuals younger than age 65, or for those who wish to delay the income stream from an annuity until retirement, there are deferred payment charitable gift annuities. These annuities work the same as those described above, but payments are deferred a minimum of one year, resulting in a higher annuity rate. The longer payments are deferred, the more the annuity rate increases. For gifts to Woodwell Climate, annuitants must be at least age 60 at the date of first payment.

Charitable Remainder Trusts

With the assistance of an attorney, you can establish an irrevocable trust naming yourself, another individual, or a bank as trustee. You may transfer cash, securities, or other property to the trust. The trust then pays income to you and/or other beneficiaries for life or a term of up to 20 years at a certain percentage or dollar amount as determined when the trust is established. When the trust’s term is concluded, the remainder is distributed to Woodwell Climate Research Center. The income and estate tax advantages of a charitable remainder trust can be significant. A trust can be an especially attractive method of giving for those who own stock with a low cost basis.

A chance encounter introduced us to Phil Duffy and the Woodwell Climate Research Center several years ago, which led to our heightened awareness and understanding of the most daunting environmental challenge facing the world today: nothing less than the survival of the planet. We began making annual contributions and also decided to include the Center in our estate planning to support Woodwell Climate’s mission—both now and in the future—to promote science-based solutions to the vexing challenge of climate change.
